Satya Dev Bushahri     ...     ...     —     ...     Appellant.

Padam Dev and others     ...     ..     ....     Respondents

Appeal by Special Leave granted by this Court on the 25th January 1954 from Judgment and Order dated the 23rd May, 1953 of the Election Tribunal, Himachal Pradesh, Simla, in Election Petition No. 14 of 1952.

The 25th day of May, 1954

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Bijan Kumar Mukherjea

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Vivian Bose

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice T. L. Venkatarama Ayyar.
For the Appellant:—Messrs. Hardayal Hardy and R. C. Prasad, Advocates.

For Respondent No. 1 :—Mr. Ved Vyas, Senior Advocate (Messrs. S. K. Kapur and Naunit Lal, Advocates with him).

JUDGMENT

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Venkatarama Ayyar, J. :—This is an appeal against the order of the Election Tribunal, Himachal Pradesh, dismissing Election Petition No. 14 of 1952. On 12-10-1951, five candidates (respondents 1 to 5 herein) were duly nominated for election to the Legislative Assembly of the State of Himachal Pradesh for the Rohru Constituency in Mahasu District. The polling took place on 23-11-1951, and on 30-11-1951 the first respondent was declared elected, he having secured the largest number of votes. The result was published in the Official Gazette on 20-12-1951. On 14-2-1952 one of the unsuccessful candidates, Gyan Singh, (fifth respondent herein) filed Election Petition No. 14 of 1952 challenging the validity of the election of the first respondent. On 4-8-1952 he applied to withdraw from the petition, and that was permitted by an order of the Tribunal dated 20-9-1952. The appellant, who is one of the electors in the Rohru Constituency, then applied to be brought on record as the petitioner, and that was ordered on 21-11-1952. The petition was then heard on the merits.

Though a number of charges were pressed at the trial, only two of them are material for the purpose of the present appeal: (1) that Sri Padam Dev was interested in contracts for the supply of Ayurvedic medicines to the Government, and was therefore disqualified for being chosen to the Assembly under section 7 (d) of Act No. 43 of 1951; and (2) that he had procured the assistance of Government servants for the furtherance of his election prospects, and had thereby contravened section 123 (8) of that Act. The facts giving rise to this contention were that one Daulataram had subscribed in the nomination paper of Sri Padam Dev as proposer and one Motiram as seconder, both of them being Government servants employed in the post office, and that one Sital Singh, an extra-departmental agent, was appointed by Sri Padam Dev as one of his polling agents at a booth at Arhal.

By its judgment dated 25-9-1953, the Election Tribunal held firstly that section 7 (d) of Act No. 43 of 1951 had not been made applicable to elections in Part C States, and that further there was no proof that on 12-10-1951, the date of nomination, there were contracts subsisting between Sri Padam Dev and the Government. With reference to the charge under section 123 (8), the Tribunal held by a majority that the section did not prohibit Government servants from merely proposing or seconding nomination papers, and that it had not been proved that Daulataram and Motiram did anything beyond that. As regards Sital Singh, while two of the members took the view that section 123 (8) did not prohibit the appointment of a Government servant as polling agent, the third member was of a different opinion. But all of them concurred in holding that this point was not open to the petitioner, as it had not been specifically raised in the petition. In the result, the petition was dismissed. It is against this judgment that the present appeal has been brought by special leave.

The first question that arises for determination is whether Sri Padam Dev was disqualified for being chosen to the Legislative Assembly by reason of his having held at the material dates contracts for the supply of Ayurvedic medicines to the Himachal Pradesh State Government. The answer to it must depend on the interpretation of the relevant provisions of Act No. 49 of 1951, which governs elections to the Legislative Assemblies in Part C States. Section 17 which deals with disqualifications runs as follows:

“A person shall be disqualified for being chosen as, and for being, a member of the Legislative Assembly of a State, if he is for the time being disqualified for being chosen as, and for being, a member of either House of Parliament under any of the provisions of Article 102.” Article 102 of the Constitution which becomes incorporated in the section by reference is as follows:

“102. (1) A person shall be disqualified for being chosen as, and for being, a member of either House of Parliament—

(a) if he holds any office of profit under the Government of India or the Government of any State, other than an office declared by Parliament by law not to disqualify its holder ;

- (b) if he is of unsound mind and stands so declared by a competent court ;
- (c) if he is an undischarged insolvent;
- (d) if he is not a citizen of India, or has voluntarily acquired the citizenship of a foreign State, or is under any acknowledgement of allegiance or adherence to a foreign State ;
- (e) if he is so disqualified by or under any law made by Parliament."

We are concerned in this appeal only with Article 102 (1) (e). The contention of the appellant is that Act No. 43 of 1951 being a law made by Parliament, the disqualifications laid down under section 7 therein would fall within Article 102 (1) (e), and would under section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951 be attracted to elections held under that Act.

The respondent attempted several answers to this contention. He firstly contended that as Act No. 43 of 1951 did not proprio vigore apply to elections in Part C States, he was not a person disqualified by or under the terms of that law as required by Article 102 (1) (e), and that therefore he was not hit by section 17. Though this contention might, at first thought, sound plausible, a closer examination of the language of section 17 shows that this is not its true import. The section does not enact that persons who are disqualified under a law made by Parliament shall be disqualified to be chosen under the Act. What it does enact is that if a person would be disqualified to be chosen to either House under an Act of Parliament, he would be disqualified to be chosen for the State Assembly. In other words what would be a disqualification for a candidate being chosen to either House, would be a disqualification to be chosen to the State Legislature. In this view, it is of no consequence that the candidate was not disqualified under section 7 (d) by its own force.

It was next contended that whatever interpretation section 17 might be susceptible of if it had stood alone, read in conjunction with section 8 of Act No. 49 of 1951 it must be construed as excluding section 7 (d) of Act No. 43 of 1951. Section 8 of Act No. 49 of 1951 enacts that Parts I and III to XI of Act No. 43 of 1951 and the rules made thereunder apply to all elections under the Act, subject to such modifications as the President might direct. Section 7 occurs in Part II of Act No. 43 of 1951, and that is not one of the Parts extended under section 8. The argument is that section 7 having been omitted by design from the sections made applicable, the legislature must be taken to have intended that it should not apply to elections held under the Act, and that section 17 should accordingly be so construed as not to defeat that intention. Reliance was placed on the well-known rules of construction that the provisions of a statute should be read in such manner as to give effect to all of them, and so as to avoid inconsistency and repugnancy. Both the sections can be given their full effect, it was argued, by holding that by reason of the non-inclusion of Part II under section 8, section 7 of Act No. 43 of 1951 was inapplicable, and that subject to that, the other provisions enacted by Parliament would apply under section 17. But this argument fails to take into account the scheme underlying Act No. 49 of 1951. The framers of that Act wanted to enact a comprehensive code of election law for Part C States. They had before them Act No. 43 of 1951 and they had to decide how much of it they would adopt. Part I of Act No. 43 of 1951 consists only of short title and the interpretation section, and that was adopted in Act No. 49 of 1951. Part II of Act No. 43 of 1951 deals with qualifications and disqualifications for membership. That subject is dealt within sections 7 and 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951. Section 7 set out the qualifications and section 17, the disqualification. It may also be noted that while disqualification for being chosen to either House of Parliament is laid down as a disqualification under section 17, the electoral roll for Parliament is to be taken under section 6 as the electoral roll for election to the State Assembly for the concerned area. These provisions cover the very ground covered by Part II, and therefore there was no need to extend any portion of it under section 8. Parts III to XI deal with the actual election from the commencement of the notification through all its stages and matters connected therewith, and they have been adopted en bloc in Act No. 49 of 1951. That being the general scheme, it is not possible to read into the omission of Part II under section 8, an intention that the disqualifications mentioned in section 7 should not apply to elections held under the Act. Nor is there any inconsistency between section 8 which passively omits Part II, and section 17 which positively enacts that what would be a disqualification under Article 102 would be a disqualification for the purpose of this Act.

A good deal of argument was addressed to us based on the substantial identity of the language of section 17 with that of section 11 of Act No. 43 of 1951, which also occurs in Part II, which contains section 7. The contention is that if section 7 of Act No. 43 of 1951, could be construed as comprised in section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951, it should also be held to have been comprised in section 11 of Act No. 43 of 1951, in which case, there was no need to enact two provisions in the same Act, one overlapping the other. The simpler thing, it was argued, would have been to include section 11 in section 7 or vice versa. All this difficulty could be avoided, according to the respondent, if the reference to Article 102 in section 11 is interpreted as limited to Article 102 (1), clauses (a) to (d) and not as including Article 102 (1) (e), in which case the same construction should logically be adopted for section 17. But this reasoning is inconclusive, because the scope of section 7 and that of Article 102 which is incorporated by reference in section 11 are different.

It must further be noted that section 11 occurs in a chapter which deals exclusively with qualifications and disqualifications for membership to electoral college in Part C States. It is therefore not possible to draw any inference from the non-inclusion of section 7 in section 11 or vice versa. On the other hand, the construction contended for by the respondent would give no meaning to the words "disqualified for being chosen as a member of either House of Parliament" in section 17. The result is that the qualifications laid down in section 7 of Act No. 43 of 1951 must be held to be comprised within section 17 of the Act.

It was then contended that even on the footing that section 7 of Act No. 43 of 1951 was comprised in section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951, the respondent was not disqualified because under section 7 (d) it would be a disqualification only if the candidate had entered into contracts with the appropriate Government, and under section 9 (1) (a) "appropriate Government, would mean, in relation to any disqualification for being chosen to either House of Parliament, "the Central Government", and in relation to any disqualification for being chosen to the Legislative Assembly or Legislative Council, "the State Government". It was argued that adopting the test that what would be a disqualification for being a member of either House of Parliament under Article 102 would under section 17 be a disqualification for being chosen to the State Assembly to operate as a disqualification the contract must be with the Central Government that in the present case, the contracts, if any, were with the Himachal Pradesh State Government, and that therefore the respondent was not a person who would be disqualified for being elected to either House, and would in consequence be not disqualified for being elected to the State Legislative Assembly.

The appellant did not dispute the correctness of this position. He contended that, as a matter of law, the contracts of Sri Padam Dev were with the Central Government and that therefore he would be disqualified under the terms of section 7 (d) read with section 9. The basis for this contention is Article 239 of the Constitution, which enacts that the States specified in Part C shall be administered by the President through a Chief Commissioner or Lieutenant-Governor to be appointed by him. Reference was also made to Article 77, which provides that all executive action of the Government of India shall be expressed to be taken in the name of the President. The argument is that the executive action of the Central Government is vested in the President, that the President is also the executive head of Part C States, and that, therefore, the contracts entered into with Part C States, are, in law, contracts entered into with the Central Government. The fallacy of this reasoning is obvious. The President who is the executive head of the Part C States is not functioning as the executive head of the Central Government, but as the head of the State under powers specifically vested in him under Article 239. The authority conferred under Article 239 to administer Part C States has not the effect of converting those States into the Central Government. Under Article 239, the President occupies in regard to Part C States, a position analogous to that of a Governor in Part A States and of a Rajpramukh in Part B States. Though the Part C States are centrally administered under the provisions of Article 239, they do not cease to be States and become merged with the Central Government. Articles 240 and 241 provide for Parliament enacting laws for establishing legislative, executive and judicial authorities for those States, and Act No. 49 of 1951 was itself enacted under the power conferred under Article 240. Section 38 (2) of that Act provides that all executive action of the States shall be expressed to be taken in the name of the Chief Commissioner. It will be seen that while the executive action of the Central Government is to be taken under Article 77 in the name of the President, that of Part C States is to be taken under section 38 (2), in the name of the Chief Commissioner. Thus, there is no basis for the contention that contracts with Part C States are to be construed as contracts with the Central Government. Nor has the appellant established as a fact that there were any contracts between Sri Padam Dev and the Central Government. The records only show that the dealings were with the Chief Commissioner, who was in charge of the administration of the State of Himachal Pradesh. The contention of the appellant that the contracts of Sri Padam Dev were with the Central Government cannot be supported either in law or on facts. It may seem anomalous that while under sections 7 (d) and 9 (1) of Act No. 43 of 1951 a contract with the State would operate as a disqualification for being chosen to the State Legislature and a contract with the Central Government would operate as a disqualification for being chosen to either House of Parliament, the respondent should be held to be not disqualified for election to the State Legislature when he holds a contract with the State Government. But that is because section 7 (d) was not in terms extended to elections in Part C States, and came in only with the qualifications mentioned in section 17.

In this view, the further question whether Sri Padam Dev held contracts with the Government at the material dates is only of academic interest. Council for the appellant argued that the statements of law by the Election Tribunal forming the foundation of its conclusions were in many respects erroneous, and that its findings must therefore be rejected. Thus, it is stated by the Tribunal that a contract could not be held to be subsisting if goods had been delivered thereunder, even though the price therefor remained due and payable. This is opposed to the view taken by this Court since, in Chatturbhuj Vithaldas V. Moreshwar Parashram (1). Then again, the Tribunal proceeds on the view that a candidate would be disqualified only if there was a contract subsisting at the date of the nomination. But it was observed in Chatturbhuj Vithaldas V. Moreshwar Parashram (1) that the disqualifications would apply during the whole of the period commencing with the nomination and ending with the declaration of the election. But these errors have not, in fact, affected the correctness of the conclusions. With reference to the Mandi contract the finding is that goods had been supplied and price received in September 1951. As regards the Mahasu contract, the Government placed the order with the respondent on 19-11-1951, and the goods were supplied in December 1951, and January, 1952. It must be mentioned that the stand taken by the appellant himself before the Tribunal was that the crucial date for determining whether there was a subsisting contract was 12-10-1951, the date of nomination, and if the evidence is not precise as to when the goods were supplied, it was a situation for which he himself was responsible.

It was on the Sirmur Contract that the appellant laid the greatest emphasis. In this case, the order was placed by the Government on 25-9-1951, and the goods were actually supplied on 1-12-1951. The appellant relied on certain letters and a telegram which were sent on behalf of the respondent on 31-10-1951, 27-11-1951 and 30-11-1951 as amounting to an acceptance of the contract. But no such point was taken before the Tribunal where it was admitted that the material date was 12-10-1951. As the question is one of fact, the appellant cannot be permitted at this stage to start a new and inconsistent case, and contend that there was an acceptance of the contract in October or November, 1951. It was further argued that even on the footing that there was acceptance of the contract when the goods were despatched on 1-12-1951, that was sufficient to disqualify the respondent, as the terminus ad quo of the period during which the disqualification was operative was not the date of declaration which was 30-11-1951 but the date of the publication thereof in the Gazette, which was 20-12-1951. It may be conceded in favour of the appellant that the observation of this Court in Chatturbhuj Vithaldas V. Moreshwar Parashram (1) that the material period starts with the nomination and ends with the announcement was not a decision on the point, as it proceeded on an agreed statement of counsel on both sides. But as the appellant conceded before the Tribunal that the material date was the date of nomination and the entire trial proceeded on that basis, it is too late for him now to change his front and contend that the material date is 20-12-1951.

It remains to consider the contention that Sri Padam Dev had procured the assistance of Government servants, and had thereby brought himself within the mischief of section 123(8). The main objection before the Tribunal under this heading related to the subscribing of the nomination paper by Daulataram as proposer and Motiram as seconder. This question has since been decided adversely to the appellant in a recent decision of this Court reported in Raj Krushna Bose V. Binod Kanungo (2), where it was held that section 33(2) conferred the privilege of proposing or seconding a Candidate on any person who was registered in the electoral roll, and that section 123 (8) could not be construed as taking away that privilege. This objection must, therefore, be overruled.

Then there is the question whether the appointment of Sital Singh as polling agent contravened section 123 (8). The majority of Tribunal was of the opinion that the appointment of a Government servant as polling agent was not by itself objectionable, but the third member thought otherwise. They, however, agreed in deciding the point against the appellant on the ground that it had not been expressly raised in the petition. It was argued for the appellant that as it was admitted at the trial that Sital Singh was appointed polling agent, the point was open to him as it was a pure question of law. As the facts are admitted, and the question itself had been considered by the Tribunal, and as the point is one of considerable practical importance, we have heard arguments on it.

Section 46 of Act No. 43 of 1951 empowers a candidate to "appoint in the prescribed manner such number of agents and relief agents as may be prescribed to act as polling agents of such candidate at each polling station". Rule 12 of the Representation of the People (Conduct of Elections and Election Petitions) Rules, 1951, prescribes the formalities to be observed in the appointment of such agents, and Form 6 framed thereunder provides for the polling agent signing a declaration that he would do nothing forbidden by section 123. That section enjoins that every agent shall maintain and aid in maintaining the secrecy of the voting. Thus, there is nothing in the Act or in the Rules barring the appointment of a Government servant as a polling agent. And on the reasoning adopted in Raj Krushna Bose V. Binod Kanungo (1) with reference to section 33 (2), the conclusion must follow that such appointment does not per se contravene section 123 (8). Nor is there anything in the nature of the duties of a polling agent, which necessarily brings him within the prohibition enacted in that section. The duty of a polling agent is merely to identify the voter, and that could not by itself and without more be said to further the election prospects of the candidate. So long as the polling agent confines himself to his work as such agent of merely identifying the voters it cannot be said that section 123 (8) has, in any manner, been infringed.

It is argued for the appellant that leaving aside the world of theories and entering into the realm of practical politics, the appointment of a Government servant as polling agent by one of the candidates must result in the dice being loaded heavily against the other candidate, and that situations might be conceived in which the presence of a Government servant of rank and importance as polling agent of one of the candidates might prove to be a source of unfair election practices. But if that is established, and if it is made out that the candidate or his agent had abused the right to appoint a Government servant as a polling agent by exploiting the situation for furthering his election prospects, then the matter can be dealt with as an infringement of section 123 (8). But the question which we have got to decide is whether as an abstract proposition of law the mere appointment of a Government servant as a polling agent is in itself and without more, an infringement of section 123 (8). Our answer is in the negative. In the present case, the finding is that beyond acting as polling agent Sital Singh did nothing. Nor is there any finding that the respondent in any manner availed himself of his presence at the polling booth to further his own election prospects. Thus there are no grounds for holding that section 123 (8) had been contravened.

In the result, the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

JUDGMENT

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by Venkatarama Ayyar J.—This is an application for review of the the judgment of this Court in Civil Appeal No. 52 of 1954. That was an appeal against an order of the Election Tribunal, Himachal Pradesh (Simla), dismissing a petition to set aside the election of the respondent to the Legislative Assembly, Himachal Pradesh, from the Rohru Constituency. Two points were raised at the hearing of the appeal before us. One was that the respondent was disqualified for election to the Assembly under section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951 read with section 7(d) of Act No. 43 of 1951 by reason of the fact that he was interested in contracts for the supply of Ayurvedic medicines to the Himachal Pradesh Government, and the other, that he had appointed Government servants as polling agents, and had thereby contravened section 123(8) of Act No. 43 of 1951.

On the first question, we held that on a true construction of section 17, what would be a disqualification for election either House of Parliament under Article 102 would, under that section, be a disqualification for election to the Legislatures of Part C States, and that the disqualification under section 7(d) of Act No. 43 of 1951 would accordingly be a disqualification under section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951. A further contention was then raised on behalf of the respondent that even if section 7(d) were to be imported into section 17, that would not disqualify him, because under that section, the disqualification must be to being elected to either House of Parliament, and that under sections 7 and 9 of Act No. 43 of 1951, a contract to operate as a disqualification to election to either House of Parliament, must be with the Central Government, whereas the contracts of the respondent were with the Government of Himachal Pradesh. The answer of the petitioner to this contention was that under Article 239 the administration of Part C States was vested in the President acting through the Chief Commissioner or the Lieutenant Governor, and that the contracts of the respondent with the Chief Commissioner, Himachal Pradesh, must be held to be contracts with the Central Government. We, however, disagreed with this contention, and held that Article 239 had not the effect of merging States with the Central Government and converting contracts with the States into those with the Central Government.

In this application, Mr. Chatterjee appearing for the petitioner invites our attention to the definition of "Central Government" in section 3(8) (b) (ii) of the General Clauses Act. It is as follows :

"Central Government" shall in relation to anything done or to be done after the commencement of the constitution, mean the President; and shall include in relation to the Administration of a Part C States, the Chief Commissioner or Lieutenant Governor or Government of a neighbouring State or other authority acting within the scope of the authority given to him or it under article 239 or article 243 of the Constitution, as the case may be".

He argues that by force of this definition, contracts with the Chief Commissioner of Himachal Pradesh must be treated as contracts with the Central Government, and that in consequence, the respondent was disqualified for election under section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951 read along with section 7(d) of Act No. 43 of 1951.

As against this, Mr. Veda Vyas for the respondent relies on the definition of "State" in section 3 (60) (b) of the General Clauses Act, which runs as follows :

"State Government" as respects anything done or to be done after the commencement of the Constitution, shall mean, in a Part A State, the Governor, in a part B State, the Rajpramukh, and in a Part C State, the Central Government".

His contention is that there being in the constitution a fundamental distinction between the Government of the Union and Government of the States, section 3(8) of the General Clauses Act should be so construed as not to destroy that distinction, and that having regard to the definition of "State" in section 3(60), it must be held that to the extent the Central Government administers Part C States under Article 239, its character is that of the State Governments. We are unable to agree that section 3(8) has the effect of putting an end to the status of Part C States as independent units, distinct from the Union Government under the Constitution. It merely recognises that those States are centrally administered through the President under Article 239, and enacts that the expression "Central Government" should include the Chief Commissioner administering a Part C State under the authority given to him under Article 239. Section 3(8) does not affect the status of Part C States as distinct entities having their own legislature and judiciary, as provided in Articles 239 and 240. Its true scope will be clear if, adapting it, we substitute for the words "Central Government" in section of Act No. 43 of 1951 the words "the Chief Commissioner acting within the scope of the authority given to him under Article 239. A contract with the Chief Commissioner would, therefore, under section 9 read with section 3(8) of the General Clauses Act, be a contract with the Central Government, and would operate as a disqualification for election to either House of Parliament under section 7(d) and 9 of Act No. 43 of 1951, and it would be a disqualification under section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951 for election to the Legislative Assembly of the State.

It is argued for the respondent that this construction would lead to this anomaly that whereas in the States in Part A or Part B, a contract with the State would operate as disqualification only for election to the State Legislatures, such a contract would in Part C States operate as a disqualification to be chosen both to the State Legislature and to either House of Parliament. That anomaly is undoubtedly there. But the contrary conclusion also involves the anomaly already pointed out, that in Part C States a contract with the State Government is not a disqualification for election even to the State Legislatures, as it is in Part A and B States. Whatever the anomaly, in our view, the proper course is to give effect to the plain language of the statute. We must accordingly hold that in view of section 3(8) of the General Clauses Act, a contract with the Chief Commissioner in a Part C State is a contract with the Central Government and that would be a disqualification for election to the Legislative Assembly under section 17 of Act No. 49 of 1951 read with section 7(d) of Act No. 43 of 1951.

This conclusion, however, can result in no advantage to the petitioner, as the further finding of the Election Tribunal is that no contracts of the respondent with the Himachal Pradesh Government were proved to have been subsisting at the material period. That finding is, for the reasons already given not open to attack in this appeal, and is sufficient answer to the objection that the respondent was disqualified under section 17.

The second point that was argued before us in appeal was that the respondent had appointed certain Government servants to act as polling agents and had thereby committed a major corrupt practice under section 123(8) of Act No. 43 of 1951. In rejecting this contention we observed that, "as an abstract proposition of Law, the mere appointment of a Government servant as a polling agent in itself and without more" is not an infringement of section 123(8). The correctness of this conclusion is now challenged by Mr. Chatterjee. His contention is that having regard to the nature of the duties of a polling agent as laid down by the Rules and further elucidated by the instructions contained in the Election Manual issued by the Government, the polling agent must be held to be interested in the candidate for whom he acts as polling agent, and that his employment would therefore hit by section 123(8).

Examining closely the duties of a polling agent under the Rules and under the Election Manual, they can be grouped under three categories. The first category relates to the period of time antecedent to the recording of votes. The duties of the polling agent at this stage are to see that the ballot boxes are, to start with, empty, that the names of the candidates and their symbols are correctly set out thereon, that the slits in the boxes are in an open position, that the knobs of the slits are properly secured, and that the boxes are properly bolted and sealed. These are duties which are cast on the presiding officer and the polling officers as well, and as these are matters to be attended to before any recording of votes begins, it is difficult to see how they can be said to assist in the furtherance of the election prospects of any one candidate more than of any other. The second stage is when the polling is actually in progress. The duty of the polling agent at this stage is to identify the voters. Rule 27 provides that when there is a doubt as to the identity of a voter, the presiding officer may interrogate the voter and that he should do so, if so required by a polling agent. Under Rule 30, it is open to the polling agent to challenge any voter on the ground that he is not the person whose name is entered in the voters' list, and when such objection is taken, it is the duty of the presiding officer to hold an enquiry and pass an order. The object of these Rules is to prevent personation, and that is a matter in which the duty is cast equally on the presiding officer. Rule 24 provides that—

“The presiding officer may employ at the polling station such persons as he thinks fit to assist him or any polling officer in identifying the electors.”

The work of the polling agent under Rules 27 and 30 is of the same character, and it cannot in itself be said to further the election prospects of any particular candidate. The third stage is reached after the polling is over. Then the boxes are to be examined with a view to find out whether the slits are open and the seals intact, the object of these provisions being to ensure that the ballot boxes had not been tampered with during the time of actual polling. Then the unused ballot papers, the tendered ballot papers and other material documents are required to be put in separate packages, and the polling agents have the right to seal all of them. It cannot be said that in carrying out these duties the polling agent advances the election prospects of the candidate, as they admittedly relate to a stage after the completion of the polling. Indeed, the work of the polling agent both in the first stage and in the last stage is similar in character, and neither can be said to contravene section 123(8). As regards the second stage, as already stated in our judgment, the duty of a polling agent is merely to identify a voter, and that could not by itself and without more be said to further the election prospects of the candidate.

Reliance was placed by Mr. Chatterjee on the following passage in Parker's Election Agent and Returning Officer, Fifth Edition, at page 20 :—

“The polling agents appointed for the same candidate to attend to the several polling stations at any election, are engaged on the same duty and in the same interest, and it is generally very desirable that they should meet, under the presidency of the candidate or his election agent, before the opening of the poll for the purpose of mutual discussion and co-operation.”

What that passage means is that as the duty to be performed by the polling agents at the several booths is of the same character, it would be desirable that they should all be assembled and their duties explained to them. This has no bearing on the question whether those duties are such as must inherently promote the election prospects of the candidate. A passage which is more in point is the one at page 18, mentioning who could be appointed as polling agents. It is as follows:

“Any competent person, whether an elector or not, may be appointed as polling agent provided he be not the Returning Officer the acting or deputy acting Returning Officer, or an officer or clerk appointed under P.E.R., r.27 or a partner or clerk of any of them.”

In this connection, it must be noted that while section 41 of Act No.43 of 1951 contains a prohibition against the appointment of certain person as election agents, there is none such with reference to the appointment of polling agents under section 46 of the Act. To hold that Government servants are, as such and as a class, disqualified to act as polling agents would be to engraft an exception to the statute, which is not there.

Accordingly, we reaffirm the view taken by us that the appointment of a Government servant as polling agent does not, without more, contravene section 123 (8). It is scarcely necessary to repeat our observation in the original judgment that if it is made out that the candidate or his agent had abused the right to appoint a Government servant as polling agent by exploiting the situation for furthering his election prospects, then the matter can be dealt with as an infringement of section 123 (8)”. In the result, this petition is dismissed; but under the circumstances, without costs.
